Inside the drab prison-walls the convicts live. They march, they make smaller ones out of little ones, and they knock the guards about.

Two adventurous prisoners, 9437 and 5681, escape. The alarm is given and the guards with their bloodhounds, give chase. The escaped jail-birds hide in logs and under the water. The strong arms of the law miss their clues and disappear in the wrong direction.

The convict chance upon a lion, steal his mane and his skin and go back in disguise to hold up the prison.

But their lives are numbered for the smaller prisoner gets cold feet, pulls off the lion's skin giving the prison-guards a chance to see the culprits. The cat turns on his one-time ally, chases him and , the guards in turn, chase the cat.
